The Government of India acting on their own behalf or as agents of His Majesty's Government, the Government of Burma and certain foreign Governments are charged with the care of all evacuees in India. In the administration of financial and other relief to these evacuees and in dealing with many other problems connected with them considerable difficulty was being experienced through lack of accurate statistical information relating to the evacuees. This handicap caused particular difficulty in making plans for absorbing evacuees into the economic life of the country. The evacuees were pouring into India across its borders through many routes at the time of evacuation and the stress under which the evacuation staff were working was too great for them to compile detailed information about these evacuees.

2. The Government of India with the concurrence of the Government of Burma therefore decided to take a census of the evacuees in India to obtain as much information about their social conditions and their occupation both before and after evacuation, as possible. Information as regards the number of evacuees who are European British subjects and foreigners which was comparatively small was already available as they were registerable under the National Service Act and Aliens Act. The Census in question was therefore confined to all evacuees who are Asiatic British subjects.

3. The statutory authority for the census was the Asiatic British Evacuees (Census) Order, 1943, issued by the Government of India under Rule 24A of the Defence of India Rules. It was obligatory under the above Order for persons who arrived in India from territories to the east of India since the 8th December 1941 to get themselves enumerated at the census. In response to the representations made by the Evacuees Associations and Chambers of Commerce it was decided to include in the census also persons who arrived from the territories to the east of India within three months before the 8th December 1941. The enumeration in the case of these persons was on a voluntary basis.

4. A few lakhs of evacuees are spread throughout India. They are not uniformly distributed. In Madras and Bengal they number over a lakh in each province while in some of the other provinces their number is very small. Even in the two provinces mentioned above the distribution is not uniform among the various districts. This uneven distribution necessitated a change in the method of enumeration usually adopted in the Indian censuses where the enumerator was required to call at every house to collect the statistical detail. At the evacuees census the evacuees had to call at the tehsil, taluk, circle or other notified office of the taluk, tehsil, circle or other corresponding unit where they are residing for the purpose of enumeration. Only the head male member or in his absence any other responsible member of an evacuee family had to report to the enumerating authorities and that person gave the particulars for the other members of the family also.

5. The period of census was fixed at one month. This long period was fixed taking into consideration the distance some of the evacuees had to travel for getting themselves enumerated. The enumeration commenced on the 1st November 1943. According to the original plan the enumeration should have been completed on the 30th November but it was found that in some areas for various reasons evacuees did not come forward to be enumerated. To give time to those evacuees who had not been enumerated by the prescribed date the period was extended till the 21st December 1943.

6. The machinery employed for taking the census also differed in Provinces. Where the evacuee population was not considerable the enumeration was carried out by the staff of the Provincial Government in addition to their ordinary duties. A special staff was employed for the census in areas where there was a concentration of evacuees.

7. The following officers were in charge of the operations where special census staff was employed :—

Madras	..	Mr. M. V. Sitaram
Bengal	..	Mr. Kazi S. Ahmed
Bihar and Orissa	..	Mr. K. C. Sanyal
United Provinces	..	Mr. L. C. Lall

All the officers were themselves evacuees from Burma and most of them had served as Assistant Refugee Officers in their respective areas before their appointment as census officers and had therefore previous experience of the evacuees in their areas. The number of enumerators and supervisors employed varied according to the area and the concentration of evacuees. Most of the enumerators and supervisors were also evacuees.

8. About 4½ to 5 lakhs of evacuees came to India from enemy occupied countries to the east of India. At the census only 393,735 evacuees enumerated themselves. There are valid reasons for the disparity in the figures. The census was obligatory only in the case of those evacuees who came to India since the 8th December 1941. Some evacuees who came to India after the 8th September 1941 were also enumerated on a voluntary basis. The census did not at all apply to those who came to India before the 8th September 1941 and this left out a good number of dependents who came to India early. The majority of the evacuees are illiterate. Though wide publicity was given to the objects of the census it is feared that some illiterate evacuees out of a misconception regarding the objects of the census did not get themselves enumerated. Another contributory factor is the coincidence of the harvest season with the enumeration period. The evacuee labourers who were employed in harvesting work might, it was reported, not have turned up for enumeration since it would have impeded their work. In order to overcome this the enumerators were asked during the later part of the enumeration period to go into the interior of villages for enumeration. Still it is probable that a few thousands of evacuees escaped enumeration. The famine and epidemic that prevailed in Bengal should also to some extent have affected the evacuee population in those areas.

9. The cost of the census was approximately Rs. 2,00,000. A third of this expenditure was borne by the Burma Government and the rest by the Government of India.

10. The success of the census was due largely to the expert and valuable advice of Mr. M.W.M. Yeatts, C.I.E., I.C.S., the late Census Commissioner for India in the initial planning, the zeal with which the superintendents, supervisors and enumerators worked and the willing co-operation of the Provincial Governments and their staff. Thanks are also due to the various Evacuees Organisations for the wide publicity they gave to the Census.
